

“Where Unions are strong, the cause of progress and social justice is advanced; and where unions are weak, the whole society suffers.”

Robert Kennedy
Miami, Florida, May 18, 1965

"No Easy Solutions"

This year "News and Views," the official publication of the Indiana State AFL-CIO said: "There are no easy solutions to the pressing problems of 1968. It is a time for all Hoosiers to reflect what they really want from their government and then to support those candidates which best represent their philosophy."

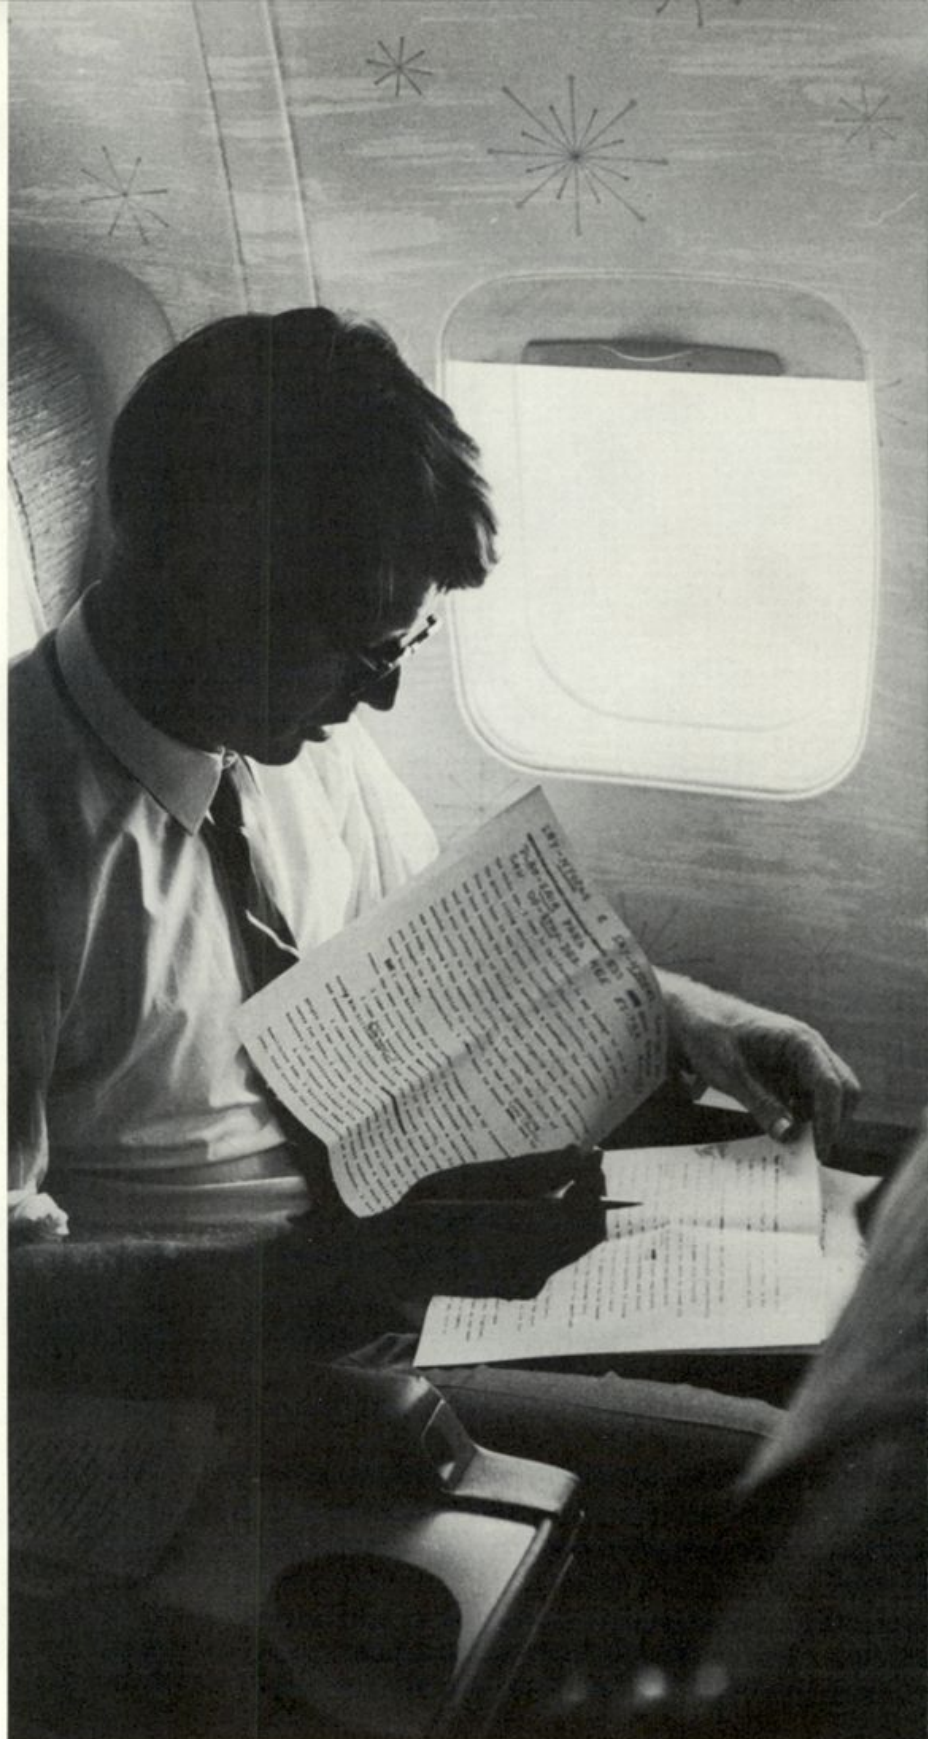

Here, then, is Robert Kennedy's labor record.

The AFL-CIO and Robert Kennedy have always fought together for:

- Full coverage under Medicare.
- Higher minimum wages and expanded coverage.
- Federal standards for state unemployment compensation.
- Protection of unions (in 1966, for example, Robert Kennedy voted against the bill ordering striking airline employees back to work).
- One man, one vote.
- Equal rights for all Americans.
- Consumer protection.

The AFL-CIO and Robert Kennedy have always stood together against:

- Section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley Law.
- Compulsory Arbitration.
- Unfair restrictions on expenditures of COPE monies.
- The Filibuster and the poll tax.
- Tax loopholes for the wealthy.
- Reducing Social Security benefits.
- Inflation.
- The spread of crime and violence (for four years Robert Kennedy was the nation's chief law enforcement officer).
